

SFLR vs. FCC

VOL. 1

April 30, 2004 9am

Federal Building, 19th Floor: Courtroom 10

April 30, 2004, 9 am in Federal Court. Come witness Round One in the continuing battle against the corporate-dominated Federal Communications Commission by local grassroots radio station, San Francisco Liberation Radio. This battle was first challenged by the FCC last July 2nd when they came to our studios and asked to enter and "inspect the equipment". Matters were escalated when the FCC, accompanied by US Marshalls, and SF Police Officers raided the small studio of the micro-powered station (located in the basement of a private home) in October of 2003. We had been somewhat expecting this since our two license applications had been turned down even though we were not interfering with anyone and we had been commended by the city government for our history of community service. The raid set into motion a plan by SFLR to challenge the FCC and their methods for licensing (more specifically not licensing) micro-powered radio stations through the court system.
