“music & art have the power to capture the attention of a complacent world – they continue to be our most effective weapons in the fight against AIDS and global poverty.”

For nearly 2 decades, Artists Against AIDS USA (A3USA) has been behind some of the most creative and effective HIV/AIDS education and awareness efforts, which are brought to life in the form of concerts, theater, film and music every year on December 1st (Global World AIDS Day).

Last year we were surprised to hear that our HIV/AIDS messages were heard as far away as Melbourne, Australia when we were invited to participate in their very first World AIDS Day concert in Federation Square titled “Rockin’ the Square”. Our very own Spencer Day was then asked to represent A3USA on our first overseas event and was given the headline position among the many Australian acts. Needless, to say, Spencer was greeted with much enthusiasm by the near 5000 attendees in the square.

With December closing in fast, A3USA will again accept the invitation and challenge to send Spencer Day and some of our other top entertainers to participate in ROCKIN’ THE SQUARE II – a concert for World AIDS Day 2005 sponsored by the Burnet Institute for Medical Research & Public Health. (<http://www.burnet.edu.au>). Spencer Day, Katie Jay and Shayna Steele are slated to make the trek and perform in what is expected to be Melbourne’s largest World AIDS Day event to date. Artists Against AIDS USA will be holding a series of fundraising concerts on November 3, 4 & 5 at the world famous Plush Room in San Francisco to help send our team of talent to Melbourne once again. The multi-talented Katie Jay kicks off our first event on November 3rd and Spencer Day brings the house down on November 4th & 5th with special VIP seating for those donating $100.00 or more.
