The Pirate Journals of an Irish Exile by Ramor Ryan

author appearing in person!

“These tales not only drag you screaming to the barricades, they send you over them, into the unknown.”

—Mick McCaughan, Battle of Venezuela

“...a geography lesson of the shadows, where borders are disregarded, revolution is in the air, and adventure is always just around the corner.”

—Jennifer Whitney, We Are Everywhere

An epic debut, these non-fiction tales read like Che's Motorcycle Diaries . . . if they'd been written by Hunter S. Thompson. A shrewd political thinker and philosopher, Ryan spirits the reader from the Zapatista Autonomous Zone to a Kurdish guerrilla camp, from Berlin squats to Croatian rainbow gatherings. At each stop along the way, we see a world in flux, struggling to be reborn.
