

An International Day of Climate Action

oct. 24
2009

350.org

350: it signifies the safe upper limit of CO₂ in our atmosphere.

Join the movement!

Climate Justice:
it means climate change is so serious, we can't afford anything less than taking on the root causes.

MOBILIZATION FOR
CLIMATE JUSTICE

Join thousands around the world in calling for climate justice at the Copenhagen climate talks:

Morning/Early Afternoon: Public Education Actions at Bay Area BART stations and transit hubs; join or start an action!
2pm Bicyclists! 350 bicyclists to ride along SF's future post climate-changed shoreline, then join 3pm Convergence!
3PM Mass Convergence Poets, Authors Read Out for Climate Justice!
Be part of a giant human banner to send a message to Obama and the world!
Justin Herman Plaza (Embarcadero BART), foot of Market St., San Francisco
ActForClimateJustice.org/West

Tired of hearing about climate change?

Then do something.

December 7-18, 2009, the world's leaders will meet in Copenhagen to decide what to do about climate change. Sadly, if these leaders reached an agreement today, it wouldn't be strong enough to do much good. It wouldn't be strong enough to reach the maximum level of CO₂ our scientists tell us that the atmosphere can safely bear is 350 parts per million.

Scientists tell us that the atmosphere can safely bear is 350 parts per million. Beyond that, our earth and its species are at imminent risk of catastrophic changes we'll never be able to stop — meaning billions of people will die. Today, the level of CO₂ in the atmosphere is already at 390 worldwide — and it's rising at 2 parts per million per year.

In order to bring our climate back to the safe zone and avoid catastrophic consequences, we need a global agreement to do massive emissions cuts now. But we can't wait for politicians to do the right thing. There's only one way we can achieve that: we need to turn the political heat way up — and push back the corporate and big business lobbyists pushing false solutions (like clean coal, and carbon trading) so they can keep polluting and keep profiting.

The good news is "street heat" — public pressure and protest — works. Nearly 1500 actions are planned in over 110 countries on Oct 24. Join the growing global movement creating "street heat" for climate justice in the lead up to the Copenhagen climate talks.

Global Action Day: 350.org
Bay Area Actions:
ActForClimateJustice.org / West

Next Mobilization — Save the Date:
Monday Nov. 30