

Revolution in Egypt and the Media

Dina Ibrahim (Assoc. Prof. Journalism at SFSU) and Sharat Lin (Eyewitness at Tahrir Square during revolution) will discuss facts and media reporting of the People's revolution in Egypt.

Saturday April 23rd 2011 at 6:30PM

6:30PM

Social Hour

7:30PM

Program: The Revolution in Egypt and Media coverage.

At: Arab American Cultural Center of Silicon Valley AACC-SV

3968 Twilight Dr, at Hogue Park, San Jose 95124

Dina Ibrahim, PhD is an Associate Professor of Broadcast & Electronic Communication Arts at San Francisco State University, where she teaches theoretical and practical courses in radio and television news. She has reported for the BBC World Service Radio in London, United Press International in Cairo, CNN in Atlanta, NPR in Austin, and KPOO 89.5 FM in San Francisco. She is currently hosting Arab TV on CreaTV Channel 15 in San Jose. Her research interests are in the psychological impact of television depictions on audiences in the United States, the Middle East and Southeast Asia, as well as analyzing the visual framing of U.S. television news representations of Islam and Arab countries.

Sharat G. Lin, PhD is president of the San Jose Peace & Justice Center. He writes on global political economy, the Middle East and South Asia, labor migration, and public health. He just spent a week in Tahrir Square at the height of the popular uprising in Cairo, and faced first-hand many of the challenges for journalists in covering nonviolent protests and violent battles alike.