

Around the World Without a Plane: Dispatches from a Hot Planet

Thursday, October 6, 2011
7pm - 9m

Join Berkeley residents Barnali Ghosh and Anirvan Chatterjee as they share stories from their year traveling across the globe without getting on a plane. Find out about what's it like crossing the Pacific Ocean by container ship and hear about the 60 interviews they conducted with climate activists in 12 countries. Learn about what climate action looks like for Vietnamese college students and how London direct action climate activists gained the support of Conservative politicians. Explore the questions one should ask when evaluating "green" or "ethical travel" and come prepared to imagine a world beyond fossil-fuel heavy aviation.

This event is part of the Ecology Center's Regenerating Solutions Salon which aims to create a time and space for talking with others about questions, issues, and challenges that come up when engaging in environmental advocacy and personal action.
