

The Guatemala Human Rights Commission/USA, together with Bay Area Latin America Solidarity Coalition
are proud to present the documentary film:

"GRANITO:

How to Nail a Dictator"

A story of destinies joined by Guatemala's past, and how a documentary film intertwined with a nation's turbulent history emerges as an active player in the present.

Followed by a conversation with Guatemalan journalist and human rights defender

Iduvina Hernández Batres

Militarization, Human Rights and Threats to Justice in Guatemala

Location: First Unitarian Universalist Church, 1187 Franklin St, San Francisco
(on the Geary #38 bus line, near the Van Ness bus lines)

Date: Friday, April 27th

Time: 6:30 pm to 9 pm

ADA accessible space. Suggested Donation: $5 to $10, no one turned away.

Light refreshments served.

Bilingual Español /Inglés

Since the election of Former General Otto Pérez Molina to the presidency in Guatemala, the country has seen disturbing trends toward re-militarization and repression of social movements, with recent moves to criminalize indigenous activists defending their right to their ancestral lands.

Iduvina Hernández, a Guatemalan journalist and human rights defender, will discuss the impact in Guatemala of having many of the officials mentioned in the documentary, who have been implicated in crimes against humanity, still in positions of power.

GHRC is a nonprofit organization that monitors, documents, and reports on the human rights situation in Guatemala. Your donations will help support our work in defense of human rights and a just foreign policy.
Contact: www.ghrc-usa.org