

WHAT'S IN A BANK?

*Why we need PUBLIC BANKS
and how we can get them soon*

Having learned from the 2008 financial crisis how much damage big banks can do to ordinary people by investing our money in things we don't want, like fossil fuels and weapons of war, we are building a movement to create public banks that will allow us to invest in affordable housing, renewable energy, and other essentials of a society that shares and cares.

Our February forum will explore the history and progress of four Bay Area public bank projects and what it will take to make them successful. We will also learn how we can divest our money from fossil fuels and the war machine now, while waiting for the public banks to become established.

SPEAKERS:

Jackie Fielder, co-founder of the San Francisco Public Bank Coalition and lecturer in the College of Ethnic Studies at San Francisco State University

Susan Harman, long-time public banking activist instrumental in getting a feasibility study and business plan launched for the East Bay Public Bank

Judy Young, a follower of Ellen Brown's work with the Public Banking Institute and member of the South Bay Progressive Alliance Public Banking Action Team

Lee Clark, activist working to develop a public bank as means to recover from severe financial crisis and replace city infrastructure following environmental calamity

Cynthia Papermaster, a coordinator of the Golden Gate Chapter of CodePink and member of the Berkeley Mayor's Task Force on Socially Responsible Banking

THURSDAY, FEB. 28 • 7 - 9 PM

Park Branch Public Library, Community Room
1833 Page Street, San Francisco

Wheelchair accessible • Sponsored by PDA-CA, SF Chapter

WHAT'S IN A BANK?

*Why we need PUBLIC BANKS
and how we can get them soon*

Having learned from the 2008 financial crisis how much damage big banks can do to ordinary people by investing our money in things we don't want, like fossil fuels and weapons of war, we are building a movement to create public banks that will allow us to invest in affordable housing, renewable energy, and other essentials of a society that shares and cares.

Our February forum will explore the history and progress of four Bay Area public bank projects and what it will take to make them successful. We will also learn how we can divest our money from fossil fuels and the war machine now, while waiting for the public banks to become established.

SPEAKERS:

Jackie Fielder, co-founder of the San Francisco Public Bank Coalition and lecturer in the College of Ethnic Studies at San Francisco State University

Susan Harman, long-time public banking activist instrumental in getting a feasibility study and business plan launched for the East Bay Public Bank

Judy Young, a follower of Ellen Brown's work with the Public Banking Institute and member of the South Bay Progressive Alliance Public Banking Action Team

Lee Clark, activist working to develop a public bank as means to recover from severe financial crisis and replace city infrastructure following environmental calamity

Cynthia Papermaster, a coordinator of the Golden Gate Chapter of CodePink and member of the Berkeley Mayor's Task Force on Socially Responsible Banking

THURSDAY, FEB. 28 • 7 - 9 PM

Park Branch Public Library, Community Room
1833 Page Street, San Francisco

Wheelchair accessible • Sponsored by PDA-CA, SF Chapter