In its 2023 report, the IPCC found that there is a more than 50% chance that global temperature rise will reach or surpass 1.5 degrees C (2.7 degrees F) between 2021 and 2040. Many parts of the world are already seeing the effects of climate change.

At this forum we will explore the problems faced by the environmental and socialist movements as we try to end and reverse global warming. We will examine the idea of de-growth, and seek ways to unite the working class around climate solutions.

Steve Ongerth – Member, Inland Boatman's Union, and cofounder of the IWW Environmental Union Caucus

Eugene Coyle – Activist with System Change not Climate Change, consulting economist on environmental issues

Ted Franklin – Coeditor of SystemChangeNotClimateChange.org; member, coordinating committee of No Coal in Oakland; organizer of Labor Rise Climate Jobs Action Group
